'Untitled' (2007)

There is a steady grow of information present in our everyday surroundings. But does more information mean that we understand things better? Like everything the media gives us a parallel world where everything is being dramatized and cut down to the exiting parts.

This short film is about someone who lives on media information only. He views the world trough camera's and newspapers. In his world everything is dramatic and there is only tension build up.

In his world the smallest things like mice and his neighbour are dramatic.

Video 5.49 min, DVD Pal
